BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Four Notables Miss Chance of Lifetime to See—and Hear—Dr. Wirt. Women Enjoyed Aftermath of His Show. Wallace Is No "Holler Than Thou". No Formality for Darrow.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—One of the few inside stories yet to be told of the dinner party made famous by Dr. Wirt is that of the folks who were invited by Miss Alice Barrows, but couldn't come.

Wirt almost met a couple of persons that night whom he would have called "brain trusters" rather than "satellites." For Miss Barrows had also asked these four friends to meet the gentleman from Gary, Ind.:

Prof. M. L. Wilson, head of the Substantive Homesteads division and father of the domestic allotment plan which became the vital part of the New Deal farm plan.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, secretary of the Public Works Board and right-hand man to Secretary Ickes.

Robert D. Kahn, director of PWA's $100,000,000 housing division.

Miss Josephine Roche, president of the Rocky Mount Fuel Co. of Colorado.

Dr. Wirt later met Wilson and Kahn through Miss Barrows and, when he heard about substance homesteads, decided that per project of Mrs. Roosevelt's was "communitarian."

Women, including many feminists, packed the hearing and applauded proudly as the three of their sex accused by Wirt denied all and defended themselves against Republican attacks.

Anna Dell, Mrs. Morgenthau and Mrs. Fugwell were there. Democratic and Republican committee members grined and nudged one another as they fought a bald partisan battle, but the latter were flabbergasted to hear that Wirt had come to Washington not knowing whom he would name and had to send Mrs. Wirt to Miss Barrows to get the names and positions of Hildegarde Kneeland, Mary Taylor, and Laurence Todd.

Ex-Senator Jim Reed was engaged as Wirt's counsel by a certain manufacturer, head of a $5,000,000 corporation, who has been fighting National Labor Board efforts to make the NRA collective bargaining clause apply to his employees.

Reed, after the hearing, made the remarkable statement that it was "irrelevant" whether Wirt's story was "true of that dinner or some other dinner."

Representative Lehighbach, a minority cross-examiner, confided to Miss Taylor: "If the party was as fatiguing as hearing the detail about it, I certainly want to extend by sympathy."

Secretary Wallace, who quotes the Bible, is intimate with the philosophers of the past, and uses the terminology of science, economics, and religion with equal exactitude, often breaking into the more homely forms of speech.

He knows and uses the language of the farm as well as anyone. The other night in an informal talk he told a poker story which betrayed at least a working knowledge of that game.

And he confessed that in a recent argument with some congressmen he had wanted to know "whether they were cockeyed or I was cockeyed."

Any atmosphere in which you find Clarence Darrow is bound to be informal. As chairman of the National Recovery Review Board, he was presiding over an oil hearing when someone handed him a cup of ice water.

He raised it high prior to tossing it off, winked at the audience and hissed "Moonshine!"

Congressman Clarence McLeod, author of that controversial bill to pay off bank deposits, has a picture of a smashed plant in his office. He was its pilot and escaped in a parachute as it crashed 2000 feet.

When Democratic Congressman Cannon of Missouri rose for a speech on Jefferson, it was Republican Congressman Martin of Massachusetts who endorsed it with: "Any Democrat who believes in Thomas Jefferson nowadays should be indicted for treason."

Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife and secretary of the speaker, sometimes attacked because she remains on the federal payroll. But her entire salary goes for employment of extra stenographers and an office research assistant. In two years she has had 97 cents of it for herself.

William B. Shearer, the "big bass drum" accused of breaking up the 1927 Geneva naval arms conference for pay from American shipbuilding companies, is to be seen at such places as the Mayflower cocktail lounge, the Interior Department, and the Wirt hearings. His present lobbying connections are a mystery.

Here's a Modern Viewpoint on Kissing and Petting

What about the kiss? That unimportant, important little item that blows the moon yet swings the earth on its axis?

We hear less of "petting" and "necking" than formerly. Has something gone wrong? Or rather gone right? Isn't Joe kissing Jennie any more when he brings her home from the High School dance, pushes the bell, and goes off whistling into the dark, leaving her to waken the family if she can, while he treks toward Pete's Place for a hamburger?

I have a suspicion that he is. I have a fair idea that there is almost as much petting as ever and that Joe and Jennie aren't much different from the Jokes and Janes of the post-war period before bridge conversation turned from flaming youth to political forums.

What has happened? A good butter and a good-night hug does not bring a flower-pot or a boot hurtling from a second-story window at least, and the kissees is no longer locked in her room on bread and water to repent her misdeeds.

The Honest Attitude
To tell the truth when mother made Jennie that peach-colored dress and sent her off to the dance looking like a piece of candy, sweet enough to eat, she very probably knew away down in her heart that Joe, or Dick or that other red-headed fellow would not be able to resist an osculatory adieu at the door. In fact, if no one ever kissed her Jennie she might even begin to think Jennie looked better in blue.

Let's be honest. Almost every fond mother likes to think her child irresistible. And there is no use in thinking the world is going to end if someone kisses her. But there is no use in thinking her a failure if somebody doesn't either. Let's begin to think almost the opposite myself.

And now I am going to get really serious.

There are kisses and kisses, and petting and petting. There are two kinds of both and we all know it.

I resent the custom that permits a careful of young people, or just two, to indulge in any type of passionate embrace that cheapens and marks them.

I resent the kiss that is anything but a wholesome smack, or the hug that is more than a spontaneous squeeze.

Harm of Cheap "Sponging"
And I will tell you why. It leaves its mark in indelible ink. This form of cheap "sponging" as it is used to be called. It creates an attitude toward life without reservations or sanctity of self, and leads to emotional saturation that robs later years of their glory.

I believe that the young girl who gets accustomed to the thrill of indiscriminate petting will not be likely to thrill any too long when she is married, to the caresses of one man. She will consider marriage, very likely, as just one more experience to be taken in her stride, and will apply the theme of reputation as she did with her petting. Marriage becomes mere market-ing and divorce ensues.

Of course this is not the inevitable result. Many such girls do settle down and make splendid wives and mothers. But the influence is pernicious, no matter how pure she may be morally and it causes unhappiness.

It is time that some of our boys learned to treat a girl to a party or a show without a petting-party in the back of their heads as thanks.

To throw up one's hands and declare that nothing can be done is erroneous. A concerted movement on the part of parents would have tremendous effect.

The young people's evening meeting will be held at 7 o'clock. And on the following Sunday, May 6th, there will be a meeting for the purpose of organizing a new evening group meeting for the young men and young women of the intermediate department age 12 to 15. At that time the pastor will be present and plans made for launching this work.

On account of the absence of the pastor, who with Mrs. Rule, is attending the meeting of the general conference of the church at Jackson, Miss., there will not be any church service, morning or evening of this day.

The general conference, composed of a equal number of laymen and ministers meets once every four years. It is this conference that is the supreme legislative body of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The meeting this year is one of more than usual interest due to some recomen-

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL will meet at 9:45 o'clock. The interest in our school continues to grow and so far the average attendance for April is above that of any month for the past several years. If you have not been attending some other school there will be a heart welcome and a place for you in our school.

The young people's evening meeting will be held at 7 o'clock. And on the following Sunday, May 6th, there will be a meeting for the purpose of organizing a new evening group meet-

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DONNA GABRIEL and MADRID SIDDAI who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are famous performers with Rente's circus. Donna's parents, also circus performers, are dead. Five years earlier Madeline ran away from the middle-western farm where her grandfather, A. J. SIDDAI, lived.

A few days before the circus is to play in her old home town, Madeline receives a letter from her grandfather asking her to spend the weekend with him. Madeline begs Donna to go in her place. The two girls look alike and Donna, smaller than Madeline, is willing to go. Her grandfather, who comes for her to the circus, is willing to let her go. The girls go to the circus and enter into a dinner with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER II
IN the dressing room Madeline was changing her costume with the assistance of one of the wild west riders who augmented her salary by acting as maid to the star performers. Madeline's eyebrows lifted at Donna's entrance. "How's the cousin?" she asked.

Donna sat down on a folding stool and kicked off the heavy carpet slippers that covered her "soft soles." Dexterosly she slipped from one costume into another. If she had heard her partner's question she gave no heed to it for she did not reply.

"It's funny your folks never write to but one of you girls," giggled Madeline's assistant. "Or maybe they write to you together?"

"They do," Madeline informed her. "Beat it, Ruth. I can finish alone." Ruth disappeared. "What's Bill like?" Madeline demanded when she and Donna were alone.

"What you'd expect. A young hayseed. You'd never see him for dust, but," Donna smiled, "I like him. He was so embarrassed it was funny. I guess we were both embarrassed. I'm going to have supper with him after the show."

"You suppose the lights shocked him out of a year's growth?" "No, I don't think so. After all, bathing suits are so common that lights shouldn't mean anything."

"Bathing suits!" Madeline sniffed. "Where would Bill Siddai see a woman in a bathing suit? Outside of Little Creek there isn't a place to swim within 50 miles and no woman ever went swimming in Little Creek."

"That's our cue," Donna said suddenly, not at all sorry to interrupt the discussion of the young man she had just met.

As she tripped lightly across the arena Donna gave a swift glance at the rows of seats, knowing full well that under the blazing lights she could not distinguish Bill Siddai from any other person.

Both girls discarded their cloaks and slippers. With deft overhead movements Donna swung her lithe, perfect body up a swinging rope that led to the flying trapeze. Once she was in position there, Madeline did likewise. The two worked without nets, a reckless disregard of life and limb.

DONNA knew that when she dug herself from the trapeze, to grasp it with her dexterous fingers an instant later, Con David always stood in the wing of the entrance, watching her.

Today Con's presence irritated her. She found it difficult to keep her mind on the count that was as necessary as the bars beneath her. Again and again her thoughts returned to the brief encounter with Bill Siddai. She wondered what he had thought of her—she who had never cared for any man's opinion before. She wondered how the trapeze act appeared to him and if he really believed her to be his cousin. Suddenly Madeline's sharp whisper, "Snap out of it! You almost missed me," brought an end to these speculations.

At last it was over—the chariot races, the wild west show, the grand finale. Lights were extinguished and the audience departed. Donna dressed quickly. She slipped into a printed silk frock that any small town girl might have worn. Her hair was a large straw hat with a wreath of daisies.

"Give him a kiss for me," Madeline laughed as they parted. "I may tell him the truth," Donna retorted.

"If you do you'll just miss your party, for nothing would induce me to go to that farm!"

Bill was waiting at the spot Donna had designated. "Have I kept you long?" she asked, annoyed that her voice should tremble.

"Not very. It was a good show." He smiled down at her. They walked over the trampled grass to the railroad tracks and Donna said, indicating the string of cars on the siding, "That's my home."

Bill frowned. "Not much of a home for the young men and young women of the intermediate department age 12 to 15. At that time the pastor will be present and plans made for launching this work."

The Gentle Gardener
I'd like to leave but daffodils to mark my little way.
To leave but tulips red and white behind me as I stray;
I'd like to pass away from earth and feel I'd left behind
But roses and forget-me-nots for all who come to find.
I'd like to sow the barren spots with all the flowers of earth,
To leave a path where those who come should find but gentle mirth.
And yet the cares are many and the hours of toil are few;
There is not time enough on earth for all I'd like to do.

sponsored by the Garden club, numerous cars wound their way to the beautiful farm until quite two hundred women were assembled in the lovely grove near the front entrance. Plenty of chairs thoughtfully provided made the ladies most comfortable, and the beautiful ideal spring day, was as if especially ordered. Promptly at 2:30, the appointed hour, Mrs. K. G. McFae, president of Hope Garden club, presented Mr. Ware who welcomed his guests in his happiest and most graceful manner and told of the features to be discussed and the program in general throughout the afternoon, and presented Mr. Frank Stanley, the county agent of Hempstead county, who told in a very practical way and illustrated on the blackboard with formulas the best methods of controlling and eradicating insects. A round table discussion followed which was very helpful and instructive. Mr. Ware then demonstrated with a growing plant the proper way to set out a plant, something each lady was very glad to learn. This part of the program was enlivened by the singing of a negro spiritual by the negroes who supplied the labor incidental to this illustration.

Mr. Ware then introduced Mr. Boyd, technical assistant of the Experiment Station, who demonstrated the pruning of blooming shrubs, stressing the cutting out of old wood, and pruning top immediately after the blooming period. Mr. Boyd also dealt with the problems of the control of plant diseases in a very instructive and helpful manner. The guests were then invited to move a short distance to one of the cottages, where a most interesting talk on landscaping was given and demonstrated by Mr. Ware. Following a short walk through the grounds and formal garden, Mr. Ware introduced Miss Helen Griffin, Hempstead county home demonstration agent, who very pleasantly greeted the ladies and gave them valuable information in regard to securing free government bulletins.

The guessing contest closed this delightful afternoon, each lady being asked to guess the number of shrubs and plants exclusive of fruit trees and blooming annuals. The successful guessers were Mrs. W. M. Garner, who guessed 208; Mrs. Ambrose Henson, Mrs. Townsend, Mrs. E. M. McWilliams, Mrs. Dobson, Mrs. J. A. Miller and Mrs. Riley Lewallen.

Before taking their departure, the assembled women gave Mr. Ware and his assistants a rising vote of thanks and appreciation for most delightful and long to be remembered afternoon.

"The committees are voluntary and are not able to force creditors or debtors to accept the suggested settlement. Consequently, creditors are willing to put their cases before a committee and obtain its recommendations since the suggestions are not binding unless accepted by both debtor and creditors.

"In order that their suggestions will be highly regarded, committee members are chosen from men who have established a reputation in their home counties for fair dealing and who know agricultural conditions. Approximately 200 meetings have been held for instructing the committees to the best ways of rendering the services expected of them."

YOUTHFUL ROBBERS of Bank Captured
Surrender 12 Hours After Raid at Dumas—Money Recovered

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Having eluded officers for nearly 12 hours after robbing the Merchants and Farmers bank of Dumas Thursday morning and shooting and wounding an officer at Gould in their flight, three thugs, hanging in age from 18 to 26, were in the county jail here Thursday night and more than $800 of the $951 taken in the robbery had been recovered.

The three are William Cantrell, aged 18, Harland, Ky.; J. O. Hiltbrand, 24, Little Rock; Thomas T. Richmond, 26, Conway.

They were arrested near Tamo, about 15 miles southeast of here, by Deputy Sheriffs John Elliott and Charlie Kirk and Lon J. Pugh, Tamo merchant, early Thursday night.

They offered no resistance but submitted meekly to arrest when officers suddenly drove up on them while they walked along a country road. The guns used in the robbery, a small caliber automatic and a large single action revolver, were in their pockets, along with the money, which was their purpose the propagation of a system whereby men would live under the Golden Rule.

"We turn about us for a solution to our problems. The president and his leaders will do everything, we say. But they can't. I once heard a speaker say, 'The church is our solution.' But the church can't solve all our problems. Nor can the school solve it. Most of our problems come down to the personal responsibility of the individual citizen.

"These are confusing times. I am reminded of the classic story of the group of blind men who came upon a elephant. One felt the elephant's leg and said, 'This animal is like unto a tree.' Another felt of his ear and said, 'It is like a fan.' Still another found its tail, and said 'It is like a vine.' The last man, grasping its trunk, said, 'No, it is like a snake.' When all the blind men gathered together to compare notes on what an elephant looked like, the confusion was as great as our confusion today while listening to the comments of fellow citizens who want to know where America is going.

"But new conditions demand new remedies and we never cut go back, we must push forward confidently.

"America needs today not only education but character, the acceptance of personal responsibility, not merely for the sake of greater personal opportunity but in order to accept the larger, unselfish duties that every good citizen falls heir to.

"Education, energy and character—energy and character are as equally vital as the first.

"I think of John Dillinger, America's No. 1 Public Enemy. Who knows but what he might have become a captain of industry if given early character and training, and had been willing to devote to peaceful pursuits the same tremendous energy that has enabled him thus far to avoid capture by the law?"

DILLINGER TREATED

It is estimated that 5,000 officers are searching for Dillinger. Reports that he had been seen continued to be received from all parts of the country.

Dr. Mortensen was suspended after admitting he had treated Dillinger and John Hamilton for wounds in the middle of March.

The health officer's confusion as to whether the date was March 13, 14 or 15 prevented authorities from determining whether it was in the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Security National Bank said that the desperadoes were wounded or in the robbery of a Mason City (Ia.) bank.

The wounds were in the shoulders and were not dangerous. They were cleaned and the men brought there by a third man, were to return to the health officer's office the next day. They never appeared. Dr. Mortensen failed to report the incident until shown pictures of Dillinger and Hamilton a few days ago.

It was March 31 the gunner was wounded a second time, in the leg, as he and Evelyn Frechette, his sweetheart, shot their way out of an apartment here when surprised by two federal agents and a city detective.

After that Dillinger sought medical attention from Dr. Clayton E. May, Minneapolis. Both physicians said they received no payment.

Dr. Mortensen said he had planned to call the officers when the gangsters made their agreed return visit to his office, which never occurred.

YOUTHFUL ROBBERS of Bank Captured

Surrender 12 Hours After Raid at Dumas—Money Recovered

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Having eluded officers for nearly 12 hours after robbing the Merchants and Farmers bank of Dumas Thursday morning and shooting and wounding an officer at Gould in their flight, three thugs, hanging in age from 18 to 26, were in the county jail here Thursday night and more than $800 of the $951 taken in the robbery had been recovered.

The three are William Cantrell, aged 18, Harland, Ky.; J. O. Hiltbrand, 24, Little Rock; Thomas T. Richmond, 26, Conway.

They were arrested near Tamo, about 15 miles southeast of here, by Deputy Sheriffs John Elliott and Charlie Kirk and Lon J. Pugh, Tamo merchant, early Thursday night.

The wounded officer, A. L. Butcher, night marshal at Gould, who was shot by the robbers as they sped through that town, was in a Dumas hospital Thursday night. He was shot in the shoulder as he and Willie Joe Bourne, Gould filling station operator, opened fire on the robbers. His wound was believed not to be serious.

Several shots were fired at the robbers' car by Dumas citizens as it left town. The Rev. Clarence Crowe, Baptist minister, discovered the robbery and gave the alarm.

With Hiltbrand wisecracking about the robbery, and his companions showing no remorse, they talked readily about the hold-up at the jail here. They wanted to use the telephone to send a telegram, to read a newspaper, and have something to eat.

Having wrecked their car—driven by the youngest of the bunch, Cantrell—they had spent about 10 hours afoot, plowing through the thick woods of that section. Richmond and Hiltbrand suffered most. Their clothing was torn in many places. Cantrell's well-cut suit was only slightly damaged, but his tie and collar were dirty.

The youths' story correspond closely to that told by bank officials and other witnesses of the robbery. They joked about the Baptist minister who gave warning.

"That joint is good for $15,000 when it's right," Hiltbrand said. "But that old guy started yelling and I couldn't chase him down the street, so we beat it."

Arizona Hunts for Child's Kidnapers

Search Widens for Daughter of Wealthy Spanish Cattle Baron

TUCSON, Ariz.—(AP)—A Prima county deputy sheriff who declined to allow his name to be used said Friday he understood a contact had been made Thursday night with kidnapers of 6-year-old June Robles after hundreds of officers withdrew from the hunt for the kidnapers at the request of the child's father.

TUCSON, Ariz.—(AP)—A thousand men—among the officers to whom John Dillinger and his outlaw gang surrendered meekly here last January—went gunning Thursday for the abductors of six-year-old June Robles. The kidnapers of the girl suddenly reduced their ransom demand from $15,000 to $10,000.

Cowboys and descendants of frontiersmen joined officers in canvassing Tucson, determined to find the grand-daughter of the reputedly wealthy Bornabe Robles, a cattle baron since Spanish land grant days.

A second ransom note, in which the abductors said they would accept $10,000 "if you act quickly," reached Robles Thursday in a manner not made public. Its delivery was announced by Undersheriff Colby S. Farrar. It read:

"Child safe. We're willing to reduce ransom of $10,000. If you act quickly, child will be returned safely as per instructions. Obey instructions. Z."

The child was picked up and whisked away Wednesday as she was going home from school. The first note was delivered to the girl's father, Fernando Robles, operator of an electric store, about two hours after June vanished.

It demanded $15,000 and was said to demand that the grandfather drive alone along a country road each evening at 9 with the money, until contact was made.

Tucson looked like a picturesque garrison as ranchers and cattlemen with six-guns hanging loose, joined police, sheriff's deputies, American Legionnaires and citizen volunteers in a house-to-house canvass of the city.

It was the purpose of officers to comb Tucson from end to end in the hunt for the little girl, and then, if still empty-handed, to take to the hills.

License Authority May Be Increased

Senate Committee Favors New Powers for Secretary Wallace

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Strengthening of the power of Secretary Wallace to license producers and handlers of farm commodities was approved Thursday by the senate agriculture committee at a surprise executive session.

Chairman Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, said Wallace requested the hearing be closed, although an open discussion of the changes in the farm act had been expected.

Committee members said apparently the secretary sought to save time and that the proposed amendments approved Thursday would be thoroughly reviewed on the senate floor.

Smith said the committee was unanimous in approving a favorable report. Although only 10 of the 19 members were present.

The action came at a time when the National Recovery Administration apparently had decided to let lapse its power to license industry.

Through licensing, the secretary of agriculture may bind handlers and distributors of farm products to observe marketing agreements. Only minorities have been licensed thus far, the pact first being accepted by the majority concerned.

In explaining the amendments, Wallace said they "represent no change in the policies of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration."

Most of the changes relate to technicalities but among the important additions and clarifications to the present act are:

"To make clear the power of the Farm Administration to provide in benefit contracts with farmers limitations or reductions in the production of non-basic commodities.

Basic commodities are those named in the Farm Act. There were seven originally—wheat, corn, hogs, cotton, rice, tobacco and dairy products. Several others have been added at this session.

Wallace said this power was needed to prevent "a dislocation of the competitive situation in non-basic commodities resulting from the reduction in acreage or production of basic commodities under benefit contracts."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

When the four essential preparations have been put down on the list of necessities for your beauty cabinet, stop and diagnose your own skin before adding another item.

Are there fine lines around your eyes, expression lines about your mouth, wrinkles across the forehead? Do you notice any enlarged pores, slight blemishes or other complexion defects? Is the skin sallow, too dry, excessively oily or otherwise imperfect? Make a mental note of the exact condition of your skin and be absolutely honest with yourself. Then, as soon as you've decided what's wrong, add to your list the cosmetic preparations which will correct the faulty conditions.

There are grand muscle oils for expression line and fine wrinkles. These are to be patted into the skin after excess tissue cream has been removed and are to be left on all night. A few drops of one of these rich oils does much to keep the throat white and smooth. However, if yours is an oily skin, obviously muscle oil isn't for you. Try, instead, one of the creams with astringent properties that help to close pores which exude too much oil. It should be left on all night too.

Pore creams are infinitely beneficial to complexion with conspicuous pores. If you have dry skin, use pore cream on alternate nights. If yours is an oily condition, use it every night.

NEXT: More about special preparations.
